'The finest portions of the work are the descriptions of bunting and of the grand scenery of the North. Here the author's thought flows in native channels, and the beautiful pictures of the wild woods and lakes, and the myriad phases of nature in forest, stream, and mountain, are painted with masterly and poetic skill.'

[Donald MacLeod in the N. T. Preeman's Journal.

"That Mr. Huntington has such a faculty and gifts may be seen by any one who will read ten pages of 'The Forest.' The sports, the adventures of an Indian hunting-ground, are put before the reader's mind with the sharp outlines, the humer, and the breadth of real life. The incidents of the journey through the wilderness, the moral interest growing up like flowers out of the commonest material facts, are charmingly described."—London Albenaues.

"We venture to say that no reader, great or small, who takes up this book (The Fresty Plate) will lay it down unfinished. It tells the story of a story told to half a dozen children in a fire-lift parlor. Their comments point in a few words the character of those who make them with such graphic power that we see the listeners before us. In this respect the book is quite remarkable. We have not met with one in which juvenile character was so discriminated and portrayed.

Jefferson City Coal Mining and Oil Manufacturing Company.

THE above company was chartered December 30, 1857. The coal bank belonging to and from which this company will operate is situated in Callaway country, in the State of Missouri lying about four miles from the Missouri river, on the opposite bank from Jefferson city, and one hundred and twenty-five nies from N. Louis by railroad. It is a gentle inclined plane from the river to the coal bank, no valleys or hills interzening, giving the company every alvantage possible over any other bank that is yet known in the United States. So far as relates to navigation, the case with which the coal can be delivered to the Missouri river, the great demand for the coal by the steamboats, the central position of the bank for supplying the northern, western, and northwestern countries, together with the read by the steamboats, the central position of the bank for supplying the northern, western, and northwestern countries, together with the there and New Orleans, inclusive, no company can complete with us.
